#FriendshipGoals

Community Miss EnolaCat Jan 29, 2019

As gamers, we spend an average of 6+ hours a week online playing video games with people from all over the world. We make new connections each time we log in, form bonds over our favorite gaming experiences, and develop new friendships with each other through our love of video games. Xbox Ambassadors are no exception.

You got a friend in me

We asked Ambassadors to share stories about friendships forged through gaming:

“I’ve met so many wonderful people through Xbox and it’s Twitter community. XboxGuss and I have been talking for the past year and he has become a close member of my family. We live half a world apart, but distance is the only thing separating our friendship. He’s my brother.”

“I met BlondiebutGeeky, XxPaul1708Xx, Its_LCGaming, SkeeterQuill and Karma through the #XboxAmbassadors while looking for fellow Destiny players to run a raid with. Spent many countless nights trying (and failing) to beat said raids. They are some of my closest friends.”

Forging bonds with fellow Xbox Ambassadors

You shared your memories building friendships with other Ambassadors:

“Here are just a few people I’ve shared great times with as #XboxAmbassadors. Chasing chicken dinners with Choppyseize. Sailing the seas with PandyYato, playing rocket league with Maxen and GTDex and playing Destiny with XxPaul1708Xx.”

It is impossible to talk about all the stories behind the friends I've made along the way as an #XboxAmbassador, but the most notable one is how SecretAsian29 and @bobyevil turned the worst summer of my life to one of the best and helped me through a really tough time!

We're passionate gamers, Xbox Ambassadors, and—best of all—we're friends. Our love of video games and the Xbox community brought us together. We'll keep unlocking achievements together and crushing friendship goals while making the Xbox community an inclusive place to play and gaming on Xbox an awesome experience for everyone!
